

Do You Have Safety Culture Challenges?

Wanting Change but Instead Getting Blame?

Turning High Risk Employees into Safety Champions

Those responsible for promoting workplace health and safety repeatedly come up against the same problem – you can give people all the information and resources they need to act safely, but some people still don't change their behaviour.

To translate knowledge into action, people need to be engaged, take responsibility and feel personally empowered to make the right choices when at work. This half day workshop will provide unique insights into safety behaviour, empowering you with tools to help change negative workplace behaviour with lasting results. Network with industry peers; learn new techniques for effective communication in today's environment, and take home new health and safety approaches you can implement straight away.
